(Jack) Elliott, Professor Emeritus of Theology and Religious Studies at the University of San Francisco, is one of the founding fathers of social-scientific criticism and its application to biblical interpretation as well as to the interpretation of other ancient literature. In this tribute 21 well-known practitioners of social-science criticism build on and advance various aspects of Elliott's work and methodology. Norman Gottwald retraces the evolution of social scientific criticism and its significance, David Aune examines the term magic as a socio-religious category, Scott Bartchy writes on Paul's tenuous authority in Corinth, Alicia Batten looks at the characterization of the rich in the epistle of James, Stephen Black studies the ethnic identity of John Chrysostom's congregation in fourth century Antioch, Zeba Crook explores memory theory in Luke's gospel, Richard DeMaris applies ritual studies to Mark's gospel, Jonathan Draper examines the role of purity and pollution in the story of the Rich Man and Lazarus, Dennis Duling explores smell as a neglected dimension of social scientific studies in ancient...
