After 21 years from the grant of letters, an administrator or executor may answer to a citation to account or distribute, the lapse of 20 years since he was liable to account, and c; but the presumption of settlement may be rebutted by proof that in fact he has neither accounted nor distributed. Norriss Appeal, 106. 2. Distribution is no part of an executors account. Id. 3. Letters were granted to an executor in 1842; in 1805, a citation was issued under which he filed an account, showing receipts and payments in each year, and that part of the estate remained in specie. Held, that the presumption of settlement was rebutted. Id. ADMINISTRATOR. 1. A widow, administratrix of her husband, married soon after his death; she made a contract for purchase of land for the second husband, to whom it was conveyed, she alleging the purchase-money belonged to him; there was no positive evidence that it belonged to the decedent; the auditor found it did not belong to him: Held, that the administratrix was not chargeable with the money. Kpfakmans Appeal, 25. 2. Prior to 1S48 the wifes father gave her S25, with which she purchased fowls and materials for sewing; by sale of...
