I hope that I did not do any damage to the instrument. The hotel, albeit small and one horse in accommodation, was scrupulously clean, and Messrs. Kitchen s clerk was very civil. I shall remember the Witlmell House chiefly on account of two of the most zealous newspaper reporters that I ever encountered. They were both young men; and, Talleyrand s admonition against zeal to the contrary notwithstanding, these gentlemen should surely attain eminence in the peculiar branch of the profession of journalism which they have adopted. They sprang upon me from a dark corner in the sample room of the hotel late at night; and one after the other made me the captive of his bow and spear. That is to say, they interviewed me half out of my mind. They wanted to know not only where I had been, and whither I was going--as if any man could tell where he was going--but likewise what I thought about Mr. Charles Stewart Parnell, M.P., and Mr. Dennis Kearney, of San Francisco; what were my opinions touching General Ulysses S. Grant and the Third Term candidature; what I had to say about the Inter-Oceanic Canal, the Monroe Doctrine, and Honest Money as against Greenbacks; and in what manner I had been impressed by the aspect of Omaha, its manufactories, its stockyards, and its smelting works. They interviewed me so long and so loudly that I fancy the gentleman in the next room must have...
