Excerpt: . . . EDWARD HAMILTON KIDDER. Immediately after graduation I was offered a tutorship in mathematics and natural science at St. Marks School, Southboro, Mass. , where I have since remained. In the summer of 1889 I assisted in conducting a summer school at Edgecombe, Maine. In the summer of 1890 I took a summer course in Medicine at the Harvard Medical School, Boston. I expect to enter the third year at the Harvard Medical School next fall. I shall always look back with pleasure on my three years of teaching, and feel sure that it has been a profitable experience for me. This summer (1891) Mr. Kidder has gone abroad to visit some of the large hospitals in Europe. WILLARD ROBERT KIMBALL. Was at first engaged in the manufacture of electric mining machinery with the firm of Sehlesingar, Kimball and Co. , of Chicago. Is now...
